Tarponkeys Purchased.

At a special meeting of the Fiscal Court Saturday to consider the question of buying the timber, the committee voted to buy the timber, the cost of $10,000. From Wards College 1000 Main Street, Kentucky, $10,000. The building was erected in 1883 at a cost of $102,000. More than $40,000 was expended in improvements.

The circuit court room contained many valuable portraits, valuable furniture, and a collection of Jesse H. Bledsoe and one of William T. Barry were painted by Jonet. Other portraits which were valuable are now lost.

Impair and defacement of the walls of the building could easily have been saved, and many citizens insisted on removing them at the beginning of the year. The architect of the original plans of the building declared there was no danger of the fire reaching the timber in the roof. A few weeks later, when the flames were encroaching on the roof, the man attempted to make to save the pictures, when the flames forced him to the window, building to save their lives. The people of Lexington and Fayette counties are accounted with sorrow over the loss of these masterpieces of art, unless the court house, it is to be hoped, will be restored.
